Earthworms

Earthworms (1) found all over the world, although they are more common in Europe. They do not live (2) deserts or places where there is a lot of snow and ice. This is because it is (3) cold for them and the ground is hard. Some kinds of earthworms have been known (4) grow to the length of a ruler, although they are usually only as long as your finger. Their bodies are made up (5) little rings and they have small hairs on them. The worm uses (6) rings to move and make holes. As they make holes in the ground, they eat the soil and all the dead stuff, and (7) produce all the useful things plants need. Earthworms are (8) important for the health of the soil and for the plants growing in it.

- Read the article about Jeju and answer the questions.

Jeju

Jeju Island is the largest island of South Korea, with an area of 1846 square km. It is also one of the nine provinces of the country, and the smallest of all of them. It was formed as a result of a volcanic eruption.

Jeju City is the capital of Jeju Island, and Halla Mountain is the key landmark of this island. It is also the tallest mountain in South Korea, with a height of 6,400 feet. This island has a temperate climate and it rarely falls below freezing, not even in winter. It is home to almost 950 different insect species, 198 bird species, 17 mammal species, and 8 reptile species.

Jeju Island is one of the new seven natural wonders of the world, and it has the finest lava tube system of caves in the world. The peak of the Halla Mountain looks like a giant crater, and is actually a dormant volcano, which means it has been inactive for years. There is a lake inside the crater, which is called Baengnokdam.

Different Colours can affect us in many different ways; that's according to Verity Allen. In her new series 'Colour me Healthy', Verity looks at the ways that colours can influence how hard we work and the choices we make. They can even change our emotions and even influence how healthy we are.

'Have you ever noticed how people always use the same colours for the same things?' says Verity. 'Our toothpaste is always white or blue or maybe red. It's never green. Why not? For some reason we think that blue and white is clean, while we think of green products as being a bit disgusting. It's the same for businesses. We respect a company which writes its name in blue or black, but we don't respect one that uses pink or orange. People who design new products can use these ideas to influence what we buy.'

During this four-part series, Verity studies eight different colours, two colours in each programme. She meets people who work in all aspects of the colour industry, from people who design food packets, to people who name the colours of lipsticks. Some of the people she meets clearly have very little scientific knowledge to support their ideas, such as the American 'Colour Doctor' who believes that serious diseases can be cured by the use of coloured lights. However, she also interviews real scientists who are studying the effects of green and red lights on mice, with some surprising results.

Overall, it's an interesting show, and anyone who watches it will probably find out something new. But because Verity goes out of her way to be polite to everyone she meets on the series, it's up to the viewers to make their own decisions about how much they should believe.
